QUANTICO LOSES TIGHT ONE TO GEORGETOWN

Quantico played Georgetown University in the annual baseball game at the American League Park in Washington, last Thursday, before a large crowd containing many distinguished personages. Quantico lost, 5 to 4 in the last half of the ninth when Shaw let Flavin's hard blow get by him and the star collegian trotted over the pan with the winning run.

The game was a thriller from when the Secretary of the Navy tossed the first ball until the last man, Flavin, had dented the pan with the run that broke up the game. Flavin, it will be remembered, was the man who almost overturned the well-known vegetables at the football game last fall when he returned a punt for seventy yards through the entire Marine team.

Kyle pitched really excellent ball and in spite of the fact that he was a bit wild, certainly deserved a win. His wildness had him in the hole several times but in the pinches he was master of the situation, forcing the batters to pop up or else giving them three hearty swings and a walk back to the bench. His support was not so good. This was undoubtedly due to both the weather, it was cold enough for football rather than baseball, and the rooters all wore heavy clothes, and to the fast big league infield. Georgetown was equally affected and turned several miscues.

The Marines would have won by a comfortable margin had not the squeeze play failed to work on two occasions. Twice there were men on third and the play was called out both times, the pitcher outguessed the runner and the batter was unable to connect. As a result on both occasions the runner was trapped and put out on the base lines.

The Marines outthit their opponents ten to seven. Three of these hits came in the initial frame and coupled with two errors accounted for three runs and made it look like a Marine day. However, Georgetown got one in the third, one in the fifth, and two in the seventh to tie it up, the Marines having added an extra run in the sixth. With things resting thus Flavin led off Georgetown's half of the ninth with his solid swat which wasn't recovered until he had crossed the plate and the game was over.

REENLISTMENT FURLOUGHS NOW NOW GRANTED ON REPORTING FOR DUTY

In accordance with a circular letter addressed to all officers by the Major General Commandant, the subject matter of which is shortly to be incorporated in a change to the Marine Corps Manual, furloughs may be granted by commanding officers upon reenlistment to the extent of two months upon a three-year reenlistment and three months upon a four-year reenlistment. Recruiting officers are also authorized to grant such furloughs but these will now become effective upon the reporting of the reenlisted man to his post for duty.

MARINE VETERAN CHAPTER NAMED AFTER COL. M'LEMORE

A new chapter of the Marine Corps Veterans Association has just been organized in Houston, Texas. This chapter is called the McLemore Detachment, in honor of Col. Albert S. McLemore, U. S. Marine Corps, who died at the Naval Hospital, Mare Island, Calif., in July, 1921.

Colonel McLemore served twenty-eight years in the Marine Corps. During the World War he was in charge of recruiting and publicity and, in 1919, assumed the duties of Assistant Adjutant and Inspector of the Department of the Pacific.

The McLemore Detachment has the following officers: N. J. Curtis, George C. Schleeter, Walter E. Baust, Ira L. Hinton. Marines and ex-Marines who are from Texas, or who have ex-buddies from that state may get full information by writing to Ira L. Hinton, Old Federal Building, Houston, Texas.

RADIO FLASHES FROM RECRUITERS

Canadian Vet Joins the Marines

The call of service life proved too strong for Stanley J. Clifford, formerly of the Canadian Army, who joined the U. S. Marines at St. Paul on April 25. According to his record, printed in the St. Paul newspapers, Clifford had an exciting time overseas. He was born in the United States, but moved to Canada, where he joined the Canadian forces when he was only fifteen years old. He served during the entire time the British forces were fighting abroad, and was captured by the Germans in July, 1917, when he was fighting with the Canadian troops at Mons. Later he escaped into Switzerland, and eventually joined his command. Due to the fact that Clifford had lost his citizenship by serving under a foreign flag, it was necessary for him to be repatriated before he could join the Marines. This was easily accomplished, and shortly afterward Clifford was on his way to Parris Island.

Pittsburgh Recruiter Now Canary Farmer

After sixteen years' service in the U. S. Marine Corps, Sergt. Julius J. Potter, who for the last seven years has been on recruiting duty in Pittsburgh, retired from the service on May 11. Sergeant Potter will devote his time to the raising of canaries on his farm at Hamarville, Pa. The Pittsburgh recruiter, who is one of the largest men wearing a Marine uniform, will be remembered by buddies who served with him in the Philippine Islands and elsewhere. He was one of the most successful recruiters at Pittsburgh.

Latest Estimate of German War Dead

Germany lost 1,846,293 dead in the World War, according to official statistics just brought up to date. Of the dead, 56,133 were officers and officials, 212,069 noncommissioned and warrant officers, 1,572,523 other enlisted men, and 5,568 whose ranks were not reported.

"MAJOR" DENBY PRESENTS MARINE GIFT TO ARMY AND NAVY CLUB

Secretary of the Navy Denby, in the uniform of a Major of the Marine Corps which he wore while serving in the Corps on active duty and to which he is still entitled as a Major of the Marine Corps Reserve, speaking, not as the Secretary but as a Marine Officer, formally presented to the Army and Navy Club in Washington, D. C., the portrait of General Harbord which was purchased by the officers of the Marine Corps as a token of the esteem in which they hold the Army officer who commanded the Marine Brigade, at the memorable action in and around Belleau Wood.

General Richards, who was head of the committee who arranged for the painting of the gift portrait introduced "Major" Denby as the speaker of the evening. In his address the Secretary stressed the importance of the action of the Marine Corps in honoring General Harbord as an indication of the cooperation between the various branches of the service. The Major General Commandant then delivered a short address explaining the significance of the various insignia appearing on the picture and on the frame. He concluded his remarks with a plea for cooperation within the various arms of the service and between them. "Let there be" he said, "no trace of factionalism between those who served overseas and those who served, in greater security it is true, but with equal zeal, here or elsewhere. Let there be unity of feeling between the branches of the armed service as there is unity of purpose."

Machine Gun Stunt in West Indies

The skill with which U. S. Marines of Santo Domingo are able to control the fire of machine guns was illustrated when Secretary Denby and his party visited the Republic during their tour of the West Indies. Captain Victor F. Bleasdale, who has charge of a machine gun unit there, staged an exhibition for the party. In this was included a modern "William Tell" stunt that gave the visitors a thrill.

Four Marines, holding small targets affixed to short handles, sat in front of the machine guns while streams of bullets tore the targets to pieces. Following this the captain took his position in front of a fixed machine gun at short range and holding a small target almost right alongside his body ordered the gunners to open fire. As the stream of bullets poured into the target, he walked straight toward the gun, apparently scooping up the bullets with the target.

Commemorate Spanish-American War

In commemoration of the twenty-fifth anniversary of the Spanish-American War, U. S. Marines and Sailors from the League Island Navy Yard, Philadelphia, paraded in that city on May 5. The Marines were clad in the uniform that was regulation during the World War. National Guard and other organizations were represented. More than 2,000 men were in line.

A Regular Walking Job

He used to walk the polished floor,
Immaculate and neat;
He worked in a department store,
Where customer's he'd greet.

With shining spats and cutaway,
His wardrobe was complete;
His looks so debonnaire and gay
Sure gave the girls a treat.

'Twas his delight to walk for miles
On duty day by day,
While sauntering about the aisles,
Where goods were on display.

The Janes he greeted on the floor,
No longer are his boast;
The other day he joined the Corps,
And now he's walking posts!

The Dog Was A Chow Hound

A graduate of the Boot Camp at Parris Island had been assigned to duty at a post farther north, and immediately upon his arrival he decided to get a haircut.

As the company barber set aside the clippers and began to make quick, snappy motions with the shears, the buck private's attention was attracted to the barber's dog who was watching the proceedings most intently.

"That dog of yours seems to be much interested in your work," commented the buck. "How do you account for it?"

"You see I'm kind of new at this job," commented the barber, "and sometimes I snip off a little piece of ear along with the hair."

The boot didn't wait for a shave.

Some of those birds who are now breaking records in dancing marathons used to holler murder a few years ago when their mothers sent them on errands to the corner grocery.

It would appear from the constantly increasing number of students who enroll for the Poultry Husbandry Course, that a number of Marines are going to devote their efforts on the outside to—"Life, liberty, and the pursuit of chickens!"

Two Marines were uncertainly flivvering their way home to Quantico from the football game at Baltimore.

"Dutch, I wancha to be ver' careful. Firs' thing you know ya'll have us in a ditch."

"Me?" exclaimed Dutch in astonishment, "why, I thought ya was drivin'."

Seasonable Headgear

The derby hat is here no more,
The soft felt's laid away;
The cap the golfer's looking for
Is not upon display.
Upon the hatter's window shelf
The twisted braids appear,
So, pick a style to suit yourself—
For straw hat time is here!

Restored to Duty

The Marine had been showing marked symptoms of mental aberration, and he was summoned before an examining board in order to determine the exact state of his mentality.

Question after question were asked of him, but the patient met each psychological test with promptness and accuracy. Finally, as a last shot, one of the examining physicians asked: "Did you ever hear strange voices, while you didn't know where they came from or who was the speaker?"

"Yes, sir," said the Marine, "when I answer the telephone."

Pat—"What be your charge for a funeral notice in your paper?"

Editor—"Fifty cents an inch."

Pat—"Good Heavens, and me brother was six feet tall."

"Mrs. Clancey, you're child is badly spoiled."

"Aw, gwan, wid yez."

"Well, if you don't believe me, go out and look at what the steam roller did to it."

Ikey—"Fadder was George Washington an honest man?"

Izzy—"Why of course, my son."

Ikey—"Then why do they close the banks on his birthday."

Father—"Son, I don't want you to go around with that girl. She has the reputation of being wild."

Son—"Why pa, she's not wild at all; I can get quite close to her."

Dear Hashmark—I have just bought a "stop" signal for my car. Where is the best place to put it?

George—Inside near the rear seat would be as good as any.

Why Marines Ship Over!

The Marine had returned to his native village after being discharged, and he took a stroll down to the local post office to get an earful from the postmaster as to what had transpired during his four years' absence.

"Anything unusual happened since I went away?" he asked.

"Nope. Ain't been nothin' special that I know of," drawled the postmaster. "Slim Goslin sold his spotted heifer to Josh Billings. Maria Perkins married some city dude who was stoppin' at the Perkinses last summer. Abner Martin has give up drinkin' and has become a to'able respectable citizen. They built a new steeple on the Baptist Church, and Deacon Frisbie shaved off all his whiskers—he wore 'em for nigh unto twenty-two year. Them's about the most excitin' things that I can think of."

The postmaster paused to give a post card to an inquiring customer, then concluded: "Reckon you'll find the old place about the same, but I calkerlate a right smart lot of folks has moved from here to the city."

Ten minutes later the Marine was studying a time table and scribbling the address of the nearest recruiting station on a piece of paper.

Answer to correspondent: No, Lucille, "cake eater" is not the male equivalent of a flapper. According to the latest authority, hereafter lounge lizards will rejoice in the title of "cookie duster."

Speaking of Inventions

The Sunday afternoon conference of buck privates was in session and the talk drifted to the subject of inventions.

"They's a lotta jack in inventions," began Spud Murphy, turning the pages of a magazine. "I see here where a guy invented a new soup ladle, and he cleaned up nearly fifty thousand berries."

"Pretty soft!" commented Slim, the company clerk. "Now if that guy will only invent something that will keep peas from falling off a knife, he'll make a fortune."

"That kind of a knife would no doubt please you and a few other sword swallowers," Spud went on, "but you wouldn't appreciate such an invention. What you need is a new thinking machine that will save you from making so many bulls in the muster roll."

"I was just thinking," commented Red Murphy, "what a fine idea it would be if someone invented an automatic sentry."

"What kind of a sentry is that?"

"Oh, some kind of a mechanical affair you could wind up every coupla hours, and it would walk post just like a regular sentry."

"Pretty good idea," said Spud. "Especially if it could be guaranteed not to 'dope off' like you do once in a while."

Red ignored the remark and continued: "I got thinkin' of that idea when I was on guard duty the other night. You could control the sentry by radio, and have a phonograph affair inside it that would challenge anyone who approached it after dark."

"The Red House is full of birds like you," said Slim, "and I wouldn't be at all surprised if they've got a cell all dusted out and waiting for you."

"Oh, I don't know," Red came back. "Didn't they control a whole battleship by radio? If they can make a big battleship work that way I don't see why the same system couldn't be applied to a mechanical Marine."

At this point the argument became so acrimonious that it woke up another buck who had been corking off in a nearby bunk. When the sleepy buck caught the trend of the conversation he horned in: "You birds and your inventions make me sick! If one of you jaspers would only invent a machine that would make a lot of saps pipe down when a hard-working Marine is trying to get some sleep, I'd be satisfied."

The buck returned to his slumbers. And thus an invention that might have revolutionized the whole Marine Corps was lost to the world.

—HASH MARK.

SERGEANT LEATHERNECK BECOMES AN M. C. I. STUDENT

By CPL. C. E. WHITNEY

Last week Sergeant Leatherneck mailed an application for enrollment in Salesmanship. He mailed this in Quantico and it was received in the morning mail last Monday. Here is what happened to his request.

The Secretary opened the mail and found the request for enrollment. He sent it immediately to the Chief Clerk in the Registrar's Office.

The Chief Clerk consulted the M. C. I. files to see if the Sergeant had ever been enrolled before. Finding that he had not he sent the enrollment request to Headquarters of the Marine Corps where the Educational Section attached a copy of the applicant's muster roll card and returned both to the office of the Registrar. The application with muster roll card attached was then turned over to the enrollment section.

The enrollment section first made an individual file case for the new student and stamped on it the serial number assigned to the student. The same section then prepared record cards containing the student's name, rank, serial number, A and I number, date of enlistment, address, name and address of next of kin, and name of course in which he is to be enrolled. There are eight of these cards. Three large ones and five small. The large cards are for filing as follows: One in the school concerned, one in the record section files, and one in files of students by organizations, called the organization file. The small cards are filed as follows: (1) The truth-teller file. This is an alphabetical file containing the card of every student who has ever been enrolled in the Institute. (2) The classification file. In this file students are kept according to their classification, such as Enlisted, Commissioned, Navy Commissioned, Navy Enlisted, and Miscellaneous. The enlisted class is also arranged according to the expiration of enlistment. (3) Course file. Here all students' cards are filed according to the course in which they are enrolled. (4) Controller file. Here cards are filed alphabetically and include the cards of all students who are borne on the rolls as active students. (5) The next of kin file. In this file are kept the students cards filed by the name of his next of kin.

A letter was then written to the student acknowledging his application and telling him to expect his first books within a few days. All papers and cards were then turned over to the inspection section.

The inspection section went over everything carefully to catch any errors. It then detached the record cards. It filed the small cards in their proper files. It kept one large record card intended for the record section, and one large card intended for the registration section in a temporary file until the enrollment had been completed. It then sent the request for enrollment with the school record card attached to the Salesmanship School, which is under the Publicity Schools group.

The Salesmanship School first drew the first books in the course from the book storeroom and placed the student's name on each. Two letters were then written to the student. The first informs him that his enrollment is completed and the second tells him how to proceed with his studies. The second letter is attached to the books. When the Chief Examiner of the Publicity Schools has inspected the letters and books the entire material is sent back to the Inspection Section.

The Inspection Section sees that everything is in due form and that copies of all letters are in the students' file case, and makes the proper notations regarding the sending out of books on the record cards which it had retained. These cards are then sent to the proper files. The Inspection Section then turns the students' file case over to the filing section and sends the text books and original letters to the mailing section.

The mailing section at once mailed the text books and letter of instruction in a package addressed to the School Office at the student's post, where the student can call and get it. The other letter, the one telling the student that his enrollment has been completed is placed in a box bearing a date one week subsequent to the date on which the lesson papers are mailed. This is mailed on that date and serves as a check on whether or not the student has received his books.

(Next week—What happened to Sergeant Leatherneck's papers at the Institute).

Advocates Observance of Mother's Day

Reminding men of the Navy and Marine Corps of the duty they owe their mothers, Secretary of the Navy Denby, issued the following bulletin to the men of the Navy in anticipation of that day: "Sunday, May 13, 1923, will be observed throughout the United States as Mother's Day. The men of the United States Navy and Marine Corps should appreciate the full significance of Mother's Day and should join in this tribute to their mothers. Every man who has a mother living should write to her on that day. When circumstances permit special services should be held. Information relating to Mother's Day may be obtained from the Mother's Day International Association, Inc., Philadelphia, Pa."

Recruiters Greet Babe at Boston

Col. A. T. Marix and several recruiters of the Boston recruiting station greeted Babe Ruth, when the latter came with the visiting Yankees to Boston for the opening game. Mayor Curley, of Boston, joined the group and the entire party was "snapped" for the Boston Advertiser.

NOTES FROM HAWAII

(Reenlisted from Pearl Harbor Weekly)

Work has been resumed on the club house after a lay off during the bad weather and very shortly it will be completed. Decorating is now in progress. A walk will connect it to the main buildings and the setting will be most attractive.

Tentative lists for return to the States on the next boat include members of the rifle team, and also Corporal Byrd, Rex Howell and Corporal Scheese.

In a recent issue of the San Diego Union there is an interesting account of the writing of "Fioretta," by Betty Thorpe. The article goes on to say, "Out of Honolulu there has come a daintily romantic novel. It is written in finished literary style and the plot is dramatic." After telling how the book was written, and reviewing it favorably, the writer goes on, "Betty's father is Col. George C. Thorpe, of the Marine Corps, until recently commanding officer of the Marine Barracks at Pearl Harbor, Honolulu. He is noted as a writer principally on sociological, psychological and philosophical subjects. He is the author of 'Psychology of the Naval Personnel,' 'Pure Logistics,' and works of a similar character." Betty never was in Italy, but having received her inspiration from pictures, locked herself away with guide books and other data, and the result was the remarkable and most colorful romance, which was published in Honolulu only recently.

The Police Sergeant has been busy of late in setting out plots of grass in front of the barracks along the lanai, and in trimming up the grass at the sides and in rear, while two mules and a mower worked wonders on the parade ground. As the roofs of the Q. M. buildings in rear are being repainted and in general the spring work carries on, the post takes on a better appearance every day.

Guyoux says that the only kick he has against the Marine Corps is the long wait between meals.

The boxing ring has been roofed over—a great improvement, and the fights held there will be improved. At the present writing a series of bouts was scheduled for the 20th of this month, but as we go to press on that date we can not cover it in this issue.

MARINES WIN BASKETBALL CHAMPIONSHIP OF NORTH CHINA

By defeating the 15th Infantry, U. S. Army team, for the fourth consecutive time, the Marines established their title as the undefeated basketball champions of North China. The record of the games played is as follows:

Marines .....	40	Ching Whua .....	32
" .....	22	Y. M. C. A. ....	17
" .....	24	Peking Normal .....	23
" .....	40	15th Infantry .....	20
" .....	31	15th Infantry .....	15
" .....	37	Y. M. C. A. ....	15
" .....	41	15th Infantry .....	15
" .....	51	15th Infantry .....	21

The team was so much superior to any of its opponents that it never really had to extend itself to win the games. The line-up is as follows: Forwards, Gorman, Knauff; Center, Rykman; Guards, Cibuleski, Schwiertlich.

SECURES POSITION AS RESULT OF M. C. I. COURSE

Another graduate of the Marine Corps Institute has realized on the investment of his spare time while in the Corps. The latest ex-student whose success gives the Institute the right to congratulate itself, is an ex-Marine who enrolled in the Bookkeeping Course while in the Corps, completed his final examination shortly after his discharge, and now holds the position of bookkeeper in a large firm in Little Rock, Ark.

In a letter to the Business Schools this student writes: "The school has helped me greatly as I now hold a position as bookkeeper in a large firm here. I thank every one connected with the school, particularly the examiners."

The seal rookeries on the Pribilof Islands, protected by armed guards in the employ of the United States, have grown from 215,738 seals in 1912 to 581,453 in 1921.

While Others Kicked About Their Jobs, This One Studied

By Will H. Hays

Written as Postmaster-General

WE have read mostly of the lives of great men who studied by the light of the fireplace or by the tallow candle. Let us see what one ordinary boy did by studying during his spare hours.

This youngster was the average country boy, born on a farm remote from any village. He had only the advantage of a very ordinary country-school education where school terms were so short, because of the farm work, that he never progressed beyond a certain point in his education at the end of the session. Each school term he arrived at about the same point in the lesson when another term closed. This is the extent of the progress of his early education. He was the youngest of the family of a widow whose husband died when the oldest child was ten years old.

Not in any way was this boy different from the average boy. He disliked school, would rather work, chase rabbits or shoot frogs, than study. He lived in a community where an education was very little needed or appreciated and was therefore making his own living early in life when he should have been going to school.

He married early in life, and then became ambitious. He began his career as a telegraph operator. Another position opened for him to try but he realized that he could not hold it because of the lack of an education. Back to the telegraph office he went, determined to use his spare moments in study. He bought a well-known dictionary and paid for it at the rate of ten cents a week because he had not enough money to pay cash. With this dictionary at his side, he never passed a word in reading without consulting its meaning or its application. Out of it he really got his education. While waiting his turn to get the telegraph circuit he read or studied. Once an official superior reported him for neglecting his work to study during spare moments in working hours, but the youth was upheld by his superintendent because of his efforts to improve his knowledge. While others were kicking about their jobs he was studying.

His next step in education was to attend a night session in the public school, opened for the benefit of those who had little educational advantages. With boys half as old he went three years to this night school. His previous education was so meager that he could not then do an ordinary problem in common fractions.

A Civil Service Examination was held in the city which he took and passed, the highest in the state, and was appointed to a Government position at a southern naval post. The aforesaid tyrannical superior and the "kickers" inquired of his young wife how he landed it. He mastered typewriting and stenography, and studied English, all after working hours. These attainments secured for him various promotions and transfers until he was transferred to Washington to the office of the Postmaster General.

Besides acquiring an education and these other qualifications, he developed to be a newspaper cartoonist of considerable distinction. After this he took up writing. As a hobby he has developed a talent for mimicry and ventriloquism.

Today the subject of this sketch is one of my most valuable aids in the Post Office Department.

I think this simple story of a young man who acquired all of his education by spare-time efforts, after he was 25 years of age, married, and working on a $50-per-month salary, is remarkable and shows what may be done where there is determination.

Mess Sergeants Please Copy

The prize list of rules for mess hall deportment has just been discovered. It winds up with this: "To prevent fruit from being taken from the table—there will be no fruit!"

Mother (To Jakey standing in water up to his neck)—"Jakey where is der baby?"

Jakey—"Aw, he's all right. I got him by der hand."

On The Other Hand

It is said that any man can be replaced in any job. But is this true? The New York Times in commenting on insurance tells the following story. Big firms sometimes insure their employees against death, as the loss of valuable employees is occasionally fatal to the business. The head of a jewelry firm died. He had been drawing a salary of $25,000 a year. After his death investigators found that he was actually worth $150,000 a year to the firm because of his personal abilities. In the branch in which he specialized the firm's business went down like a toboggan when death ended his control.

Some Bull

The Marine home on furlough in a small Indiana town entered the local barber shop.

As the barber worked he made several slips and each time he pasted a small piece of paper over the cut.

When the Marine left the shop he handed the barber a dollar and said: "You're a gifted man, my son, for you are a barber, a butcher and a paper hanger combined."

"Boy call me a taxi."

"All right, sir, you are a taxi."

P. I. Boot: "Doctor, something is gnawing my brain."

Doctor: "Don't worry, it'll soon starve to death."

Quick, the Needle!

One of our subscribers has written in, asking, who King Tut ever knocked out?

It was the Marine's first day at sea and as he was hanging over the rail feeding the fish he was approached by the ship's doctor who asked:

"My man, is you stomach weak?"

"Weak hell, I guess that I'm throwing it as far as the rest of them on this ship."

"That shows that a girl can be distant without being cold."

"What does?"

"That picture of that Hawaiian girl."

"Mose, what would you do if you received a letter from the Ku Klux Klan?"

"Well, suh, I'd read it on a train."

A certain Marine entered a haberdashery and asked to be shown a high-class hat. A chapeau was brought to him and after carefully inspecting it, he asked the price.

"Twenty dollars," was the reply.

He again turned his attention to the hat, turning it over and over in his hands.

"What's the matter?" asked the dealer.

"I'm looking for the holes," was his answer.

"Holes, what holes?"

"Why, the holes for the jackass that would buy this to put his ears through."

I saw a fellow jump off a 25-story building today.

Committing suicide?

Oh, no; just practicing.
